Curriculum:

Fashion Styling and Creative Direction • October start

Fashion Branding unit

The Fashion Branding unit will provide students with an introduction to marketing, digital marketing, and entrepreneurship. Students will produce extensive research aimed at developing their creative skills and to support their future units.

Theoretical studies of marketing and branding will create an awareness of the meaning of identity for contemporary fashion markets and contextualise how brands operate and respond to innovation, sustainability and demands and changes within these markets. Cross disciplinary learning and collaboration will be introduced within the Interdisciplinary Project. At the end of this unit, students will research and propose a new fashion visual brand book, focusing on a communication strategy for a clearly identified market segment. The application of taught theory, documented in a written format will underpin the brand book. The submission document will foster viable ideas and trigger innovation. Students will develop their knowledge in styling and image, as well as retail and VM. Students will extend personal identity into a brand identity, underpinning the outcome based on the chosen pathway.

Fashion Magazine unit

In the Fashion Magazine unit students will plan, organise and develop a fashion magazine proposal, from concept ideation to digital editing. Students will be involved in the concept development and production stages. Students will style fashion images and concept, considering ethical issues and integrating a sustainable and inclusive approach to their practice. This process encourages the application of communication strategies, based on industry real life simulation scenarios and driven by innovation. Students will be required to build a research book which will support the final proposal and will help students to communicate their ideas and concepts. Areas of research will be cross disciplinary and based on contemporary issues. They could include fashion, art, advertising, new media, still and moving image, architecture, design, music, advertising, theatre, social and cultural events, news.

Fashion, Art and Cultural Context unit

The unit Fashion, Art and Cultural Context will introduce students to a comprehensive critical analysis and evaluation of fashion intended as a socio-cultural global phenomenon and provide students with the theoretical knowledge necessary to interpret fashion practices in relation to art movements and other cultural manifestations.

The unit will adopt a diachronic approach to the study and evolution of fashion practices since the Industrial Revolution; nonetheless, whenever appropriate it will also adopt a thematic approach aiming at exploring the relationship established between fashion, art, and the cultural framework within which these operate.

On completion of the unit, students will have attained a sense of the cultural and global dimension of the fashion industry, together with the challenging yet close relation it has established with art and have developed an informed sensibility with regards to all the above.

Methods may include (but not limited to):

- projects to encourage independent learning through investigation, inquiry and problem solving;

Programme Specific Assessment Criteria

The methods of assessment used give breadth and depth, which allow for both the formative and summative assessment of every student at each stage of the programme.

Formative Assessment:

Formative Assessment informs both teachers and students about student understanding at a point when timely adjustments can be made. During formative assessment students could be involved in the assessment process. These formative assessment situations will also give students an opportunity to learn to critique the work of others. Some of the instructional strategies that will be used formatively include the following:

- criteria and goal setting: asking students to participate in establishing what should be included in criteria for success;
- self and peer assessment: with peer evaluation, students see each other as resources for understanding and checking for quality work against previously established criteria;
- student record keeping: helps students better understand their own learning as evidenced by their classroom work. This process of students keeping ongoing records of their work not only engages students, it also helps them, beyond a "grade," to see where they started and the progress they are making towards the learning goal.

Summative Assessments:

These assessments are means of gauging students' learning, at a particular point in time, relative to established marking criteria.

Summative assessments can occur during as well as at the end of each unit and concentrate on specific evidence of student work, examples as follows:

Portfolio Assessment is used to assess a variety of projects that have been developed throughout the unit.

Practical Coursework allows the students to demonstrate their understanding and application of practical areas of study.

Written Reports are required in some study areas, where a clear and structured brief is provided and the students are asked to submit work to me marked independently and anonymously by staff.

10. Student Evaluation

Student feedback is essential to the programme development and student comments are used to enhance both the successful management of the programme and the teaching/learning strategies.

Istituto Marangoni gathers student opinion in a variety of ways, which may include the following:

- Informal contact with Programme Leader and subject Tutor through appointments with academic staff;
- Issues will be taken to Programme Reflective Meetings and added to the Annual Academic Monitoring Report;
- Formal Student Representation;
- Semester/Term Questionnaire;
- Resources Questionnaire (at the end of each academic year);
- Final Questionnaire (at the end of a study cycle);
- NPS (Net Promoter Score) Questionnaire (at the end of each academic year).

It would be desirable that students provide details of their identity when giving constructive feedback on the course and teaching methods. There might be occasions when that is not appropriate and Istituto Marangoni recognises such exceptions. In these instances, the programme teams and central support services will ensure that anonymity and confidentiality are respected.

In order to 'close the feedback loop' and to communicate any improvements resulting from participants attendance, at least once in the academic year, programme teams relate back to participants the actions taken in response to their views.

Participants will be asked to answer to a series of questions, for example, if it was clear what they were meant to be learning on the unit, if the teaching had helped them learn effectively and if they have developed new skills or improved the existing ones.

The data will be analysed and the Programme Leader will be required to comment on:

- key strengths and issues arising from student performance;
- key strengths and issues arising from student feedback.
